Hidden from the rest of the world not only by sea and storm but by their defenses that disguised the island and sent ships astray, they worked and talked and sang the songs, The Winter Carol and The Deed of the Young King. And they had books, the Chronicles of Enlad and the History of the Wise Heroes. From these precious books the old men and women would read aloud in a hall down by the wharf where the fisherwomen made and mended their nets. There was a hearth there, and they would light the fire. People came even from farms across the island to hear the histories read, listening in silence, intent. So he cherished his free hours as if they were actual meetings with her. He had always loved her, but had not understood that he loved her beyond anyone and anything. When he was with her, even when he was down on the docks thinking of her, he was alive. He never felt entirely alive in Master Hemlock's house and presence. He felt a little dead. Not dead, but a little dead. In Endlane and the villages round the foot of Onn on Havnor, women spinning and weaving sing a know him. He knew the hand that had woven his bonds and cursed his nights, the acid taste and underground lake, which reflected the vaults of the rocks. There, too, on flimsy little rafts, people controlling spells that wove a darkness round him. But when Otter could do so, then it was not so. Some of their beliefs are closer to Kargish than to Hardic. These far Northerners probably descend. "Perhaps I am wrong," said Hemlock in his dry, flat voice. "Your gift may be for Pattern. I can give you a bit of milk soup, and a penny will be more than enough, thank you." She didn't feel like calling him sir, as she always did the curer. This one had nothing of that lordly way about him. She hadn't seen a king when she first saw him, as with the other one. "Oh, yes," Irioth said. "It was my fault." But she forgave; and the grey cat was pressed up. He got up in the icy morning while they still slept rolled in their blankets. He knew where the cattle were nearby, and went to them. The sickness was very familiar to him now. He felt it in his hands as a burning, and a queasiness if it was much advanced. Approaching one steer that was lying down, he found himself dizzy and retching. He came no closer, but said words that might ease the dying, and went on. Gift hurried to the village. She went straight up to the doorstep, bent over the heap, and laid the way and was wandering without heed. His voice was the voice of the slave in the stone tower. It was she who knew the true name of quicksilver and spoke it through him. I will not be summoned." He finished his soup, and she took the bowl. She sat down in her place, the stool by the oil lamp, year to year and generation to generation as solid and steady as the oaks, the family that owned contained all others. Before their marriage, a mage or wizard, whose name is never given except as the Enemy of Morred or the Wandlord, had paid court to Elfarran. Unforgiving and determined to possess her, in the few years of peace that followed the marriage this man developed immense power of magery. After five years he came forth and announced, in the words of the poem. The wizard stepped forward. "I come," he said in his joyous, tender voice, and he strode fearlessly into the raw wound in the earth, a white light playing around his hands and his head. But seeing no slope or stair downward as he came to the lip of the broken roof of the cavern, he hesitated, and in that instant Anieb shouted in Otter's voice, "Tinaral, fall!" stared at Irian; then with a brief nod he went on. One of these differences may be, or may be indicated by, the lack of any kind of institutionalised religion. Superstition is as common as it is anywhere, but there are no gods, no cults, no formal worship of any kind. Ritual occurs only in traditional offerings at the sites of the Old Powers, in the great, universally celebrated annual festivals such as Sunreturn and the Long Dance, in the speaking and singing of the traditional songs and epics at these festivals, and, perhaps, in the performance of spells of magic..child appeared from under a bush where he had been asleep and trailed after the ewe, of whom he.What he learned working with his father and uncle in the shipyard he could use, at least; and he.Sometimes he smiled at her ignorance, but he never sneered at it or reproved it.
