moment before they fell back to earth as pebbles. Diamond and Rose had worked out several such when he was talking to the work, and insisted that he do his carpentry with tools, in silence. Hemlock was loth to practice any of the lesser arts of magic. He did not put out a finding spell, think that he had come as near to Morred's Isle as he would ever come, Medra stayed a while longer. people, and put a stop to this rubbishy talk, if she could. I went outside. It was indeed a park. The trees rustled incessantly, invisible in the gloom. I. She lived with Medra in his small house not far from the Net House, though she spent many days. He saw the lines of the spells that held him, heavy cords of darkness, a tangled maze of lines all about him. There was a way out of the knot, if he turned around so, and then so, and parted the lines with his hands, so; and he was free. tub, and she went into her room while he had his bath on the hearth. When she came out it was all. "Pure?". Otter had got control of his face and voice. He wiped his eyes and nose, cleared his throat, and said, "Might be a good idea. Come to Roke. Safer.". "Yes," said the Patterner. "What goes too long unchanged destroys itself. The forest is for ever." "To come here," he said. He was beginning to tremble less. His bare feet were a sad sight, bruised, swollen, sodden. She wanted to tell him to put them right to the fire's warmth, but didn't like to presume. Whatever he was, he wasn't a beggar by choice. "I will come, Medra," she said. She held out her thin hand in a fist, then opened it palm up as if. looked back at him with a grin. to do, to learn? He followed him down one of the principal streets and from it into a district of small houses, the old weavers' quarter. They grew flax on Pody, and there were stone retting houses, now mostly unused, and looms to be seen by the windows of some of the houses. In a little square where there was shade from the hot sun four or five women sat spinning by a well. Children played nearby, listless with the heat, scrawny, staring without much interest at the strangers. Tern had walked there unhesitating, as if he knew where he was going. "He's not too well," she said, speaking low. "He was curing the cattle away out east over the.insignificance. These were brave, wise men, seeking to save what they loved, but they did not know." "Yes," Irioth said. "I understand. You are a kind woman." She was talking about him, about his not knowing what he was doing. She was forgiving him. "A kind sister," he said. The words were so new to him, words he had never said or thought before, that he thought he had spoken them in the True Speech, which he must not speak. But she only shrugged, with a frowning smile..Gelluk stood tense and trembling, still at a loss. "Shall we go?" he said to the cowboy, who set off at once with a wave to Gift and a snort from his little mare. The curer followed. The hinny had a smooth, long-legged walk, and her whiteness shone in the morning light. Gift thought it was like seeing a prince ride oft, like something out of a tale, the mounted figures that walked through bright mist across the vague dun of the winter fields, and faded into the light, and were gone..set off up the rough path round the hillside to an old stone and brick stableyard, empty of.four or five times a day, it'll heal clean, I'm sorry."
