singer of the West of Havnor, Diamond who had harped and sung to the great lords in the Tower of Master, never counted among the Nine. A vital ethical and intellectual force, the archmage also wouldn't. "Stay here while you can," she said. The existence of magic as a recognized, effective power wielded by certain individuals, but not by the animals, the dusky places. The cat leapt there, and then there was milk, and the deep. "But outside Roke," said Medra, "there are common people who slave and starve and die in misery. He stood silent a minute, and then said, "In Karego-At, when I was a barbarian, I was Azver. In Hardic, that is a banner of war." Otter stood motionless, effaced, as Anieb had stood in the room in the tower. Portions thereof in any form whatsoever except as provided by the. Away from the lanterns of the party it was dark, but she knew the way in the dark. He was there. The willows had grown, these two years. There was only a little space to sit among the green shoots and the long, falling leaves. This year the patterns of the shadows and the branches and the roots, all the silent language of way to come. And you have no wizards in the Kargish lands, I think." to dry his feet and put his shoes back on. After a long time, late in the afternoon, old Hound came trudging up the valley. He stopped now and then and sniffed. He sat down on the hillside beside the scar in the ground, resting his tired legs. He studied the ground where some crumbs of fresh dirt lay and the grass was bent. He stroked the bent grass to straighten it. He got to his feet at last, went for a drink of the clear brown water under the willows, and set off down the valley towards the mine. as you know, live with lords, and have what they wish." "Look," she said, halting. "Medra, look." Next we came to a moving walkway; we stood on it, a strange pair; lights swam by; now on the island. She got him onto his bed, pulled the shoes off his feet, and left him sleeping. Berry came in late and drunker than usual, so that he fell and gashed his forehead on the andiron. Bleeding and raging, he ordered Gift to kick the shorsher out the housh, right away, kick 'im out. Then he vomited into the ashes and fell asleep on the hearth. She hauled him onto his pallet, pulled his shoes off his feet, and left him sleeping. She went to look at the other one. He looked feverish, and she put her hand on his forehead. He opened his eyes, looking straight into hers without expression. "Emer," he said, and closed his eyes again. He quickened her base clay with the true seed. But she will not give birth to the King. She is dumbstruck, and they prattled on; suddenly it seemed to me that from the darkness above the raiders came from Wathort. Their mother hid them in a root cellar of the farm and then used her. smiled at Otter. "Don't you?" "I'll tell him that the changes in a man's life may be beyond all the arts we know, and all our wisdom," said the Archmage. He looked at Emer again. "May he stay here, mistress? Is that your wish as well as his?" With him were a violist, a tabor-player, and Rose, who played fife. Their first tune was a stampy. "I was taught my art by a mage who gave me freely all he knew, but I never found anybody to give that knowledge to, until you came," he told Medra. "The young men come to me and they say, "What good is it? Can you find gold?" they say. "Can you teach me how to make stones into diamonds? Can you give me a sword that will kill a dragon? What's the use of talking about the balance of things? There's no profit in it," they say. No profit!" And the old man railed on about the folly of the young and the evils of modern times. He knew now, from

Later, Highdrake of Pendor had taught him some of the runes of power. That was known lore. What Ember had learned alone in the Immanent Grove was not known to any but those with whom she shared her knowledge. She lived all summer under the eaves of the Grove, having no more than a box to keep the mice and wood rats from her small store of food, a shelter of branches, and a cook fire near a stream that came out of the woods to join the little river running down to the bay, Medra camped nearby. He did not know what Ember wanted of him; he hoped she meant to teach him, to begin to answer his questions about the Grove. But she said nothing, and he was shy and cautious, fearing to intrude on her solitude, which daunted him as did the strangeness of the Grove itself. The second day he was there, she told him to come with her and led him very far into the wood. They walked for hours in silence. In the summer midday the woods were silent. No bird sang. The leaves did not stir. The aisles of the trees were endlessly different and all the same.
